

A Jazz approach to innovation

FROM PAGE 13

developing countries in global trade is expected to double.

Candide Consulting managing director Rodin JS Kumar added on his observation that while successful entrepreneurs are driven with strong purpose of vision and mission, they must possess strong leadership skills required for developing dynamic people in their organisations. "Also, innovation and a strong sense of providing value for customers are keys to entrepreneurial success," he said. Quoting a Jazz approach to innovation, he emphasized that innovation was the key factor that differentiates a successful entrepreneur from an ordinary business owner.

However, the spectacular world economic growth has also strained the planet's resources and has produced the challenges of sustainability.

Moving on, they also had the Global Climate Change & Food Security Summit to address this issue.

Bringing together more than 30 distinguished speakers from around the world, these entrepreneurs, researchers, government representatives offered a rich insight into making things happen in the this increasingly challenging and competitive world of entrepreneurship.

Maizon further added that the main differentiator of this Summit from others is that in The Global Diaspora Business

Candide Consulting managing director
Rodin JS Kumar

GA Group
chairman
George
Abraham

Summit is that the distinguish speakers are mostly entrepreneurs - business owners and investor themselves. "What they will be sharing with us is their own experiences and workable business model grounded in the realities of doing business in today's uncertain and dangerous economic conditions," she said.

George concluded that the presence of such eminent business people as speakers from around the world and the presence of global delegates was indeed a heartwarming sign of the importance of the summit.